Senior Class History

IN the fall of 1913 enrolling day found thirty-five Freshmen ready for a year of study, fun and frolic.

Soon the class had its first business meeting and elected officers and class teacher; they also chose their colors and flower.

During the year there were two class parties; the girls entertained the boys at Vera Anthony's home and the boys entertained the girls at J. Oliver McIlwaine's home. There were the usual hikes and picnics of a class.

Only twenty-three returned in the fall of 1914 to continue their studies as Sophomores. Some had gone away and a few new ones had come, but these were ready for a year's hard work.

There was little time for play that year, and the only form of amusement was hikes, but these furnished great fun.

The Sophomore girls won great renown as cooks, and their Guest Day and serving of the Junior-Senior Banquet were their best work.

Soon that school year had passed and 1915 followed fast to find twenty Juniors, such confident, earnest Juniors, that ere the year had passed folks said, "Such Juniors we never saw before."

There was the Teachers' Reception at the Prose home in the early fall, where Mr. Brown won a Junior pennant.

Then the Junior party at the home of Mildred Woodburn.

Then the Juniors were entertained by the Seniors on a hike which was duly followed by a return.

When spring arrived, the Annual Junior-Senior Banquet, a great success with the Reception afterwards at Bessie Prose's home.

Lastly, the Juniors were heard of as "Decorators," when Commencement came, for the stage arrangement was considered by all as very pretty.

In the fall of 1916 there were twenty happy Seniors, sorry that this was to be their last year. At class meeting Mr. Neiman was elected class teacher, William Carr president, Lee Larmer vice-president, Mildred Woodburn secretary and treasurer, and Vera Anthony class editor.

The usual hikes were the first amusements of the year and were continued at intervals throughout the year. With Hallowe'en came the ghosts and goblins with the Seniors to the McIlwaines. The Senior wedding took place in January, when Seniors went to the Prose home to find one of their number, Bessie Prose, a blushing bride, Mrs. Earl Clarke. Cupid found six Senior girls entertaining the boys at Mildred Woodburn's home. Then ere long another of our members was lost, Jennie Hankins. A party was given at Margaret Stoskopf's home by Juniors and Seniors in honor of Jennie and Julia Hankins.

The Senior boys won renown when they won the pennant in the boys' Inter-Class Basket Ball games, and their captain, John Fitts, accepted it and presented it to the high school to remain in the assembly room.

The Seniors gave the class play at the Princess April 27. "Kicked Out of College" was a great success.

Many of the Seniors had to study hard to pass the State Normal Training examination, and the others did the same, and so ended the high school career of the Class of '17.

Senior—1917

William Carr our president is,
He tends strictly to his own biz,
He is tall and fair,
Always studies with care
Especially for a physics quizz.

William Connor a good athlete,
At guarding he can't be beat;
He's good here and there,
But best anywhere
That he chances a preacher's daughter to meet.

Wilford Schafer, as keen as a sickle,
For the girls he doesn't care a nickel,
He's courteous and kind
But has his own mind
When talking to a girl so fickle.

Wonderful things you'll find in packages small,
That's what you would Veronica call;
Her hair is yellow,
Her heart is mellow,
Whenever her Ford is about at all.

And John Fitts the athlete so strong,
Who has been goal thrower for H. H. S. so long—
He is very fleet,
Real hard to beat,
And at nothing whatever, can he be wrong.

Mae Lindsay with her dignified look,
Studies real hard from her book.
She's taken to a Maxwell,
No more we can tell,
Yet has never her lessons forsook.

Editor and Vice-President is Lee,
At the top of our list he'll ever be;
 He sure is nifty,
 Very thrifty,
And to the heart of a Junior girl he still holds the key.

Gordon Thomas, at evening you'll hear him call
Number 101, the Methodist parsonage hall;
 Perhaps I'm not right,
 Maybe he studies at night
And doesn't go down there at all.

Mildred Woodburn, all her tasks she'll beguile,
Her face is always bright with a smile;
 She loves to chatter,
 But that doesn't matter,
Since it helps the time to while.

And just a verse for Mae Abel,
Who, for short, we all call M-able;
 She is graceful and tall,
 No flower of the wall,
For just look at the grades she can label.

Vera Anthony, whose nickname is Dolly,
When out with the bunch, she sure is jolly;
 She is good and true,
 All things she can do
We fain would depart from her, "by-golly."

What shall we say of Charles Ross,
In basket ball, under his feet grows no moss,
 His eyes are blue,
 His heart is true,
And at entertaining girls, he's not at a loss.

Margaret Stoskopf—here's to her fame,
In basket ball she's surely made a name;
 She's pretty, you see,
 As studious as can be—
H. H. S. will miss her next year, just the same.

Robert Redding, the mischievous one,
You'll find that he's just full of fun;
Of all the rest,
He's the very best,
And, from his tasks he's never run.

Blanche Whaley, the blonde of the class, and say,
On the piano she surely can play;
She's very argumentative,
And also originative,
She's ready for a lark just any old day.

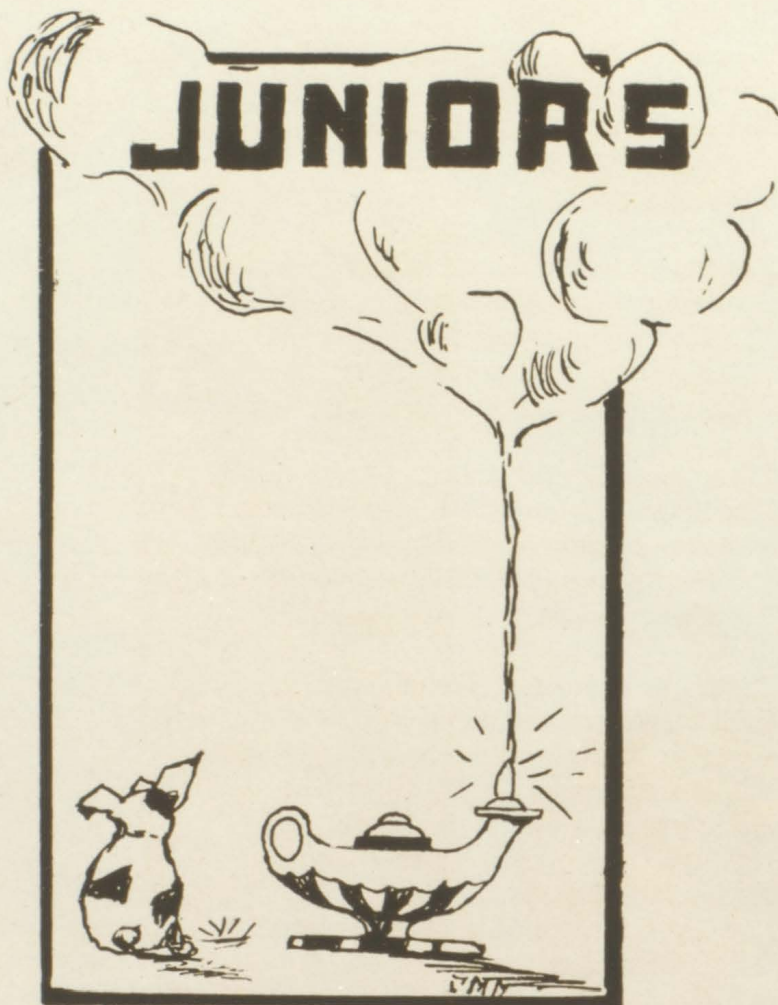

And now, just a line for J. Oliver Mac,
Guarding information he doesn't lack;
He's going to teach school,
No time he can fool
With people who don't have the knack.

Then, too, there's VaLeda Simpson,
The heart of our guard she has won;
She studies her book,
Has a dignified look,
Yet she's always ready for fun.

And now a word of Floyd's worth,
Of his ever-present mirth,
For he's always happy,
Never snappy—
He is known all over the earth.

As for Ruth, we'll not write of her fame,
But leave that to this poem's name;
If it makes you laugh,
Or it makes you daff,
Please don't the authoress blame.

History of Junior Class

Seventh and Eighth Grades

THESE were years of unrestrained joy, occasional dampening of the enthusiasm in the form of chastisements by the teacher, and rhetorical, which everyone heartily detested, and this detestation has grown rather than diminished down to the present year. It may be added that studies were also indulged in. A glimpse of a dignified speaker on equal suffrage, a sextette singing, "My Dog Rover," or Albert Nimocks reciting one of his funny "Uncle Josh" stories, appears from the dim recollections of rhetorical of the past. Miss Rich presided over the recitations in the seventh grade. Miss Cheney and Miss O'Neil had joint charge of the eighth grade class. The boys of the eighth grade were making athletic history that year. Robert Carr was the star of the common school athletic meet held with Great Bend for a grand Loving Cup. A shelf was later made, and the cup now adorns the front of the high school auditorium. Then something happened at the close of the year that caused the boys to slip into torturing stiff collars, and the girls to haul out their "Sunday best." That something was a party arranged by Miss Cheney, and given at the home of Amy Gerndt. Of the seventeen Juniors of the present year, Leonard Taylor, Mary Wilhelm, Lefa Wilson, Dewey Ruggles, Katherine Siegfried, Mirza Bennett, Mamie Prindle, Albert Nimocks, Edna Hall, Elva Deal and John Meyer graduated to the high school.

It was a timid bunch of Freshmen who were ushered into the turmoil of high school life in 1914. They were cautioned by their parents not to overstudy and get brain fever, and were continually told by upper students that failure would surely be their reward. It was this year that the abominable long session was experimented with, and it must be confessed that a notice to attend long session was regarded as a prison sentence by most of the Freshmen and avoided as such.

The organization meeting was full of close elections and stumbling but loudly applauded speeches by the officers. Miss Ekblad was elected class teacher. Mr. Hall taught the boys how to hammer their fingers in Manual Training; Miss Blevens taught the girls how to make better pies than mother made, and the samples devoured by certain lucky boys showed that she had succeeded; Miss Flint led a class through the annals of Ancient History, which left them dangling on the brink of the downfall of Cæsar at the end of the year; Mr. Bechtold taught his German class the principal language of the central powers, and Miss Ekblad instructed certain prospective doctors and lawyers in Latin.

There was an introductory party at the beginning of the year at Lenora Hooker's, followed by a magnificent Hallowe'en party given by Joy Edwards. The social season was closed with a party at the home of Lefa Wilson. Add to these enjoyable functions, weiner roasts and hikes galore, and the Freshman social calendar was certainly full. In the "Big Four" athletic meet held at La Crosse in the spring of the year, Robert Carr was the individual star. The pennant, hanging in the auditorium, commemorates this victory. Julia Hankins, Alex Ochs, and Lucy Humphrey entered school during this year. The Freshman booth at the Commencement Exercises was nicely decorated, and every member of the class was proud to sit under the banner, "Freshman."

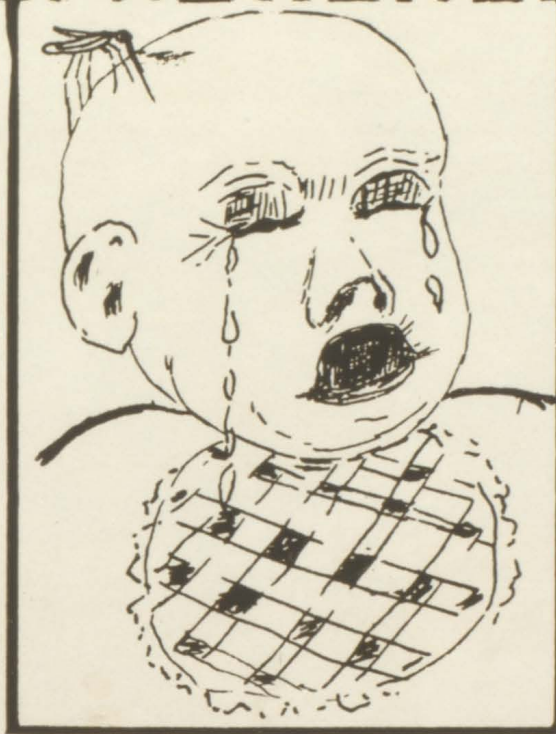

The class began its second year in high school with high hopes after a good vacation. At the organization meeting, Miss Flint was elected class teacher. The new Sophomore teachers were: Miss Surtees, who cautioned the English class never to use "aint;" Mr. Brown, who taught the Agriculture class and Arthur Turner the principles of agriculture; Mr. Nutting and Mr. Neiman, who straightened the crooked lines made by the Geometry class. After the usual number of hikes, an enjoyable party was given at the home of Julia Hankins. Lefa Wilson and Lucy Humphrey entertained later in the season. The Sophomore class had quite a good year in sports. In the Inter-class Basket Ball League, the boys' team ranked third with a percentage of .60, and the girls' team also ranked third in their division. The Sophomores were the runners in the interclass athletic meet. Taylor succeeded in gaining the position of substitute on the high school team. The booth at the Commencement Exercises this year was decorated in the class colors arranged around a large placard bearing the name, "Sophomore." John Johnson and Rama Barnes were new Sophomore students of this year.

Our Junior year was a memorable one in many lines of activity. The new Junior teachers were: Miss Faris, who instructed us in the science of Physiology; Mr. Rankin, who told us many things about our own mind that we never knew before, and Mr. Kroesch, who bravely took up the task of teaching German, even if the world is at war with the country that uses that language. The big social event of the first half of the year was at the home of Edna Hall. It was here that the game of "J-U-N-I-O-R" became famous in a night. Delegates from the Senior and Sophomore classes were guests. The farewell party given by the Senior and Junior classes to Jennie and Julia Hankins at the home of Margaret Stoskopf was an event to be remembered a long time with pleasant thoughts. Everyone had a gloriously good time, and the hostility which is natural between the two higher classes of high school was at low ebb. Alex Ochs and Dewey Ruggles were members of the high school quartette. Mildred Dunham gained a place on the High School Debating Team. The boys' Basket Ball Team rallied after a rather disastrous start and finished the season next to the pennant winners with a percentage of 714. The girls finished third in their division. Taylor, Ruggles, and Meyer played on the high school team, and Julia Hankins was a member of the girls' team. Mildred Dunham entered school this year, completing the present number of members, seventeen. Here's hoping that seventeen graduate next year. This leads us down to the present, and leaves us staring into the future, yet to be unfolded to reveal its joys or woes.

Sophomore History

ON the fourth of September, 1915, the class of 1919 was organized, with Miss Alta Surtees as class teacher.

From the first we were a jolly, but studious, class, and as such not only attended to school work, but also enjoyed many social events. Skating was one of the popular sports of the year, and we entertained ourselves as well as the Juniors.

We had been teasing a long time to go on a picnic, so on the twenty-ninth of April the boys furnished the horses and hay rack, the girls the "eats," and we all went on a hay ride, without any hay in the rack, to District 56, eight miles northwest, for a picnic and to attend the last day of school program.

On another fine spring day a picnic party was arranged for our class, which all enjoyed except those few who were fated to decorate the Princess for the Class Day Exercises that evening.

The picnic started out at 7:00 in the morning in a hay rack, and went to Horse Shoe Bend. They took their dinner along and made an all day picnic of it, and what a jolly good time they had, playing baseball, hunting the first flowers of the spring, getting mixed up with patches of poison ivy, fishing without bait, and taking a joy ride in a little canoe, which ended by someone leaning too heavily on one side and capsizing the boat, making Steve, Slim and Happy look like mud turtles. They spent the next hour on the bank, taking sun baths.

One disagreeable feature was the sun-burn on the dainty arms and faces of the girls, which had necessarily to be covered with cream and powder before they could go to the Princess looking respectable.

While the picnickers were having such a good time, those who stayed to decorate the Princess were hard at work. They enclosed their rows of seats with their colors, represented by red and black tissue paper. They also draped a twisted chain from the iron rods above, down to the seats. Fred worked quite faithfully until he thought he, the only boy, was being imposed upon, then he slipped off.

After a three months' vacation of work and play this merry crowd of girls and boys came back to dear old H. H. S. to continue their courses.

A few days after school had begun we all assembled in Room 15, with our class teacher, had our first meeting under the name of Sophomores, and elected the following class officers: Class Teacher, Edward Kroesch; President, Opal Sypolt; Secretary and Treasurer, Sylvia Reed; Chairman of Social Committee, Golda Barnes; Boys' Basket Ball Captain, Russell Garrett; Girls' Basket Ball Captain, Golda Barnes.

The first "Good Time" the Sophomore Class had was a Sophomore hike, one night after school, in the fall. We met at the school house and went in a body, as usual. We went to the "Big Elm," taking weenies, marshmallows, bread and pickles. Miss Surtees, our former class teacher, went along with us. After having eaten the delicious supper, we played games until it grew dark, then we all sat on the creek bank, camp-fire style, told stories, sang, and ended with "Perfect Day," sung by Mr. Kroesch, which was very appropriate for the occasion.

Not very long after the first hike, the Juniors asked us to go on a hike with them. We went to the "Cross Roads" southwest of town, taking along with us the customary hike supper.

After supper we had a good time playing games. We returned by the way of Main Street and tested our lungs at the street corners by giving class yells.

And this year skating, too, formed a diversion from our usual school work. We had one grand skate, to which the Juniors and Freshmen were invited, but we were honored by the presence of the whole Senior High School.

One of the unfortunate things in our class life is the loss of old members because of sickness, promotion or dropping out of school. From the last cause we lost six members; from the second, one. We were especially sorry to lose Ruth Hunter, but she had to leave on account of the illness of her mother.

For the last evening of Ruth's stay with us a Sophomore surprise party was planned and successfully carried out at the Connor home. We enjoyed a pleasant evening, with a real track meet, interesting games of various kinds, songs and refreshments. At the hour of 10:00 the class departed, leaving with Ruth the best wishes of her classmates and the hope that she might soon return.

We are especially proud of our basket ball teams and the good showing they have made in the class tournament; although handicapped by the lack of experience and weight, our boys won a good per cent of their games. Our class is also very proud of the honor of having four of its members on the girls' first team of basket ball.

The Sophomore Class is proud of its girls' basket ball team. In spite of the fact that the girls had several difficulties, such as not much practice and one or two unskilled players, they are the champions of H. H. S. and received for their honor a pennant.

Here's to the Class of '19; she will have her joys and gaiety, her sorrows and grief, but may she prosper and each girl and boy succeed in the life work which he or she takes up, making their lives account for dear old H. H. S.

Athletics

THE H. H. S. ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION was formed in 1912, for the purpose of promoting athletics in the high school. It aroused a greater interest in athletics, but was never so successful as in the year '16-'17. During that year the membership was increased to one hundred twenty-five. Officers of the Association were:

President MR. EDWARD KROESCH
Vice-President MR. C. M. NEIMAN
Manager LEE LARMER
Treasurer WILLIAM H. CARR
Secretary VERA ANTHONY

Basket ball has been the principal athletic game in the high school, but during the years of '15-'16 and '16-'17 much more enthusiasm and "pep" was shown by the school. The teams went through a very successful season in the year of '16-'17, considering the size of the team, winning a good per cent of the games. Although four regular players will graduate this year, there are prospects for good teams next year.

Much enthusiasm was aroused in the two years of '15-'17 by the interclass basket ball games. All the classes were represented and all of the teams fought loyally for their class. The two teams winning the most games in '15-'16 were the two Senior teams. Pennants were awarded to the champions. The finals this year were played February 9, 1917, the Senior boys winning by a score of 68 to 17, and the Sophomore girls by a score of 17 to 15. Pennants were also presented to those two teams.

A pennant was won by the representatives of the H. H. S. at a track meet held at La Crosse.

The Chorus

IN the year 1916-1917, under the direction of Miss Marie Shuey, the High School Chorus was organized with an enrollment of sixty. Among those enrolled twelve were Seniors: Mae Abel, Vera Anthony, Blanche Whaley, Margaret Stoskopf, Mildred Woodburn, VaLeda Simpson, Charles Ross, William Carr, William Connor, J. Oliver McIlwaine and Gordon Thomas; Jennie Hankins, accompanist. The chorus rehearsed once a week.

Girls' Glee Club

THE GIRLS' GLEE CLUB was reorganized in 1916-1917 by Miss Marie Shuey. The membership of this club was then increased to forty-seven members. Seven of the club girls were Seniors: Mae Able, Vera Anthony, Blanche Whaley, VaLeda Simpson, Margaret Stoskopf, Mildred Woodburn and Jennie Hankins. In the early part of the year the Glee Club made its first public appearance. Rehearsal was held once a week.

Orchestra

LAST but not least in the musical world of Hoisington is the High School Orchestra. The Orchestra was organized in the year 1915-1916, by Miss Marie Shuey. The Orchestra was composed of nine persons. The number enrolled did not increase nor decrease during the following year. The Orchestra has made rapid progress this year, now being able to play some rather difficult music. The Orchestra has been much in demand this year, having played at school entertainments, chapel and club meetings. Two Seniors participated in the rendering of the orchestra numbers: Charles Ross, trombonist, and Jennie Hankins, accompanist.

Boys' Glee Club

ANOTHER one of the High School organizations is the Boys' Glee Club. This has been reorganized and its membership increased to twelve members. Among the boys enrolled, four were Seniors: Charles Ross, Gordon Thomas, Lee Larmer and J. Oliver McIlwaine. Miss Agnes Crawford was chosen as accompanist. The Glee Club rehearsed once a week. In the early part of the year the boys made their first public appearance.

Debating League

THIS year Hoisington High School added a new activity to her list of student enterprises. Early in October the High School joined the Seventh District Debating League. About twenty-five members joined and began preparation for the debates that were to come later.

The question decided upon for debate by the state officers was: "Resolved, That the Federal Government should own and operate the telephone and telegraph systems of the country."

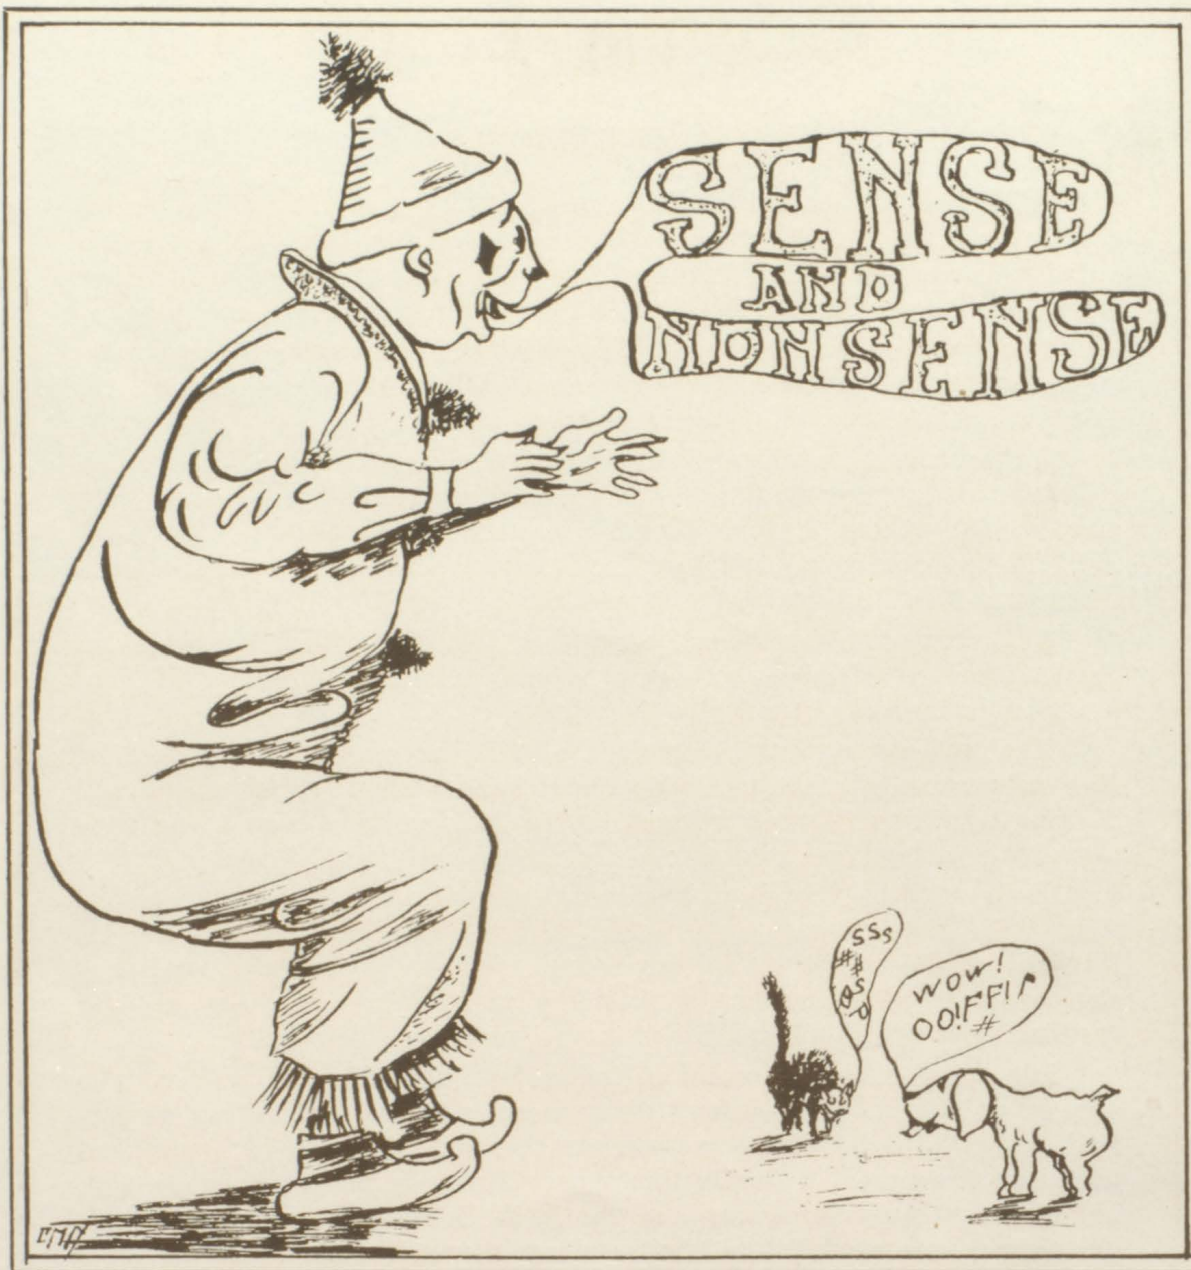

Sixteen members entered the preliminary contest, which was to decide who would represent our High School against other schools. The judges gave places to the following persons: John Fitts, Mae Abel, Mildred Dunham, Vera Anthony, Lee Larmer and Maida Dryden. Bessie Prose and Mae Lindsay were chosen as alternates.

The affirmative team was composed of John Fitts, Vera Anthony and Maida Dryden. Members of the negative team were Mae Abel, Mildred Dunham and Bessie Prose.

The first contest was a dual debate with Ransom on November 25th. Our affirmative traveled to Ransom and their affirmative team came to Hoisington. The affirmative team lost to Ransom by a two to one decision, but the negative team won a unanimous decision at home.

The next debate was a triangle contest with Great Bend and Garden City. The same teams again upheld their respective sides. While we lost both of these debates, we found that even against schools which had several years of experience in this line of work our debaters made a creditable showing and had cause to feel proud of their work.

More and more the world of today demands men and women who can, in an able manner, defend their views in public. Debating as carried on in the Debate League trains to this end. It is to be hoped that the interest aroused in debate this year will not be permitted to die out, but that next year the students of the High School will do their part in bringing debate work to the front and again win honor for the school.

Jokes

Mr. Reazin, in Physics: "What will not freeze?"

Mildred: "Hot water."

WHY, HOW AND WHEN THE TEN SENIOR GIRLS ARE SEEN TOGETHER—

Veronica— Of the Senior auto, the light's ahead,

Ruth— Because, you see, both heads are red.

Margaret— Where one of these you chance to see,

Mildred— The other always chances the same place to be.

Blanche— These two always seen together,

Mae L.— Where one is not, the other is never.

Vera— Constantly with each other, these two,

Mae— When not seen together is something new.

Jennie— Whenever one goes to walk,

VaLeda— The other one goes to talk.

Ψ Ψ Ψ

Vera, in History: "Lee, take your feet out of the way, so we can see the map."

Ψ Ψ Ψ

Miss Surtees: "Clarence Shull, put your feet under the desk, so I can tell where you are."

Ψ Ψ Ψ

Marchie Scott (at 12 a. m.): "Clarence, you had better imitate a tree."

Happy: "How do you do that?"

Marchie: "Branch out and leave."

Ψ Ψ Ψ

Miss Blevens stood looking wistfully into a shop window.

Vera (coming along): "Oh, Miss Blevens, what are you going to buy—that palm beach suit or beautiful dress?"

Miss Blevens (with a sigh): "Neither, Vera; nothing ready-made fits me but a handkerchief."

Class '17 Prophecy

THE seer sat in a dark room with heavy draperies of Oriental designs. The weirdness of his surroundings was somewhat lightened by the large glass crystal upon which so much depended. He gazed upon the crystal as it lightened; his keen eyes saw the future of the Class of 1917 before him.

The entire world in the year 1927 was portrayed in the crystal as he told the fate of each, one by one. The first who appeared was a small lady with a quick step, as she stepped out upon a Chautauqua platform. A reader, who was recognized as Ruth Doty.

The scene changed, and in a different part of the world was a prominent lawyer seated in his office, Robert Redding, with a troubled look upon his face as he picked out the particulars in a law suit.

Once again the seer saw a dainty little high school teacher of history, with a stern but happy look upon her face, Vera Anthony.

Then in the far land of Germany was found Jennie Hankins, now a noted music student.

The seer looked troubled as he beheld in the crystal the former Veronica Johnston, now Mrs. Ford, running a runabout.

As the seer placed his hand once again over the crystal a large mansion presented itself with its fashionable mistress, Mrs. J. McIlwaine, ex-Mae Abel.

Almost instantly there was a sudden change. It seemed as if the seer had completed his tale, when his countenance changed, and in the midst of some movie actresses was found Mildred Woodburn, posing for the camera.

The room darkened, but the bulb lightened again with Margaret Stoskopf in the midst of harvest hands, their official cook.

The room was quiet, with no sound except the quick breathing of the seer as he looked upon the crystal with hope of seeing the future of some Senior. He waited in suspense for the crystal to fulfil its mission, when the light dimly illuminated a scene in the far distant land of Germany. In the battle field, with shells flying, bombs bursting in air, was Gordon Thomas.

The next scene was in direct contrast to this scene, for in a quiet country village was found J. Oliver McIlwaine, the city manager of a new government installed in the progressive city of Boyd.

It seemed as if a mist had settled over the crystal, for the seer ceased to gaze upon it for a minute, but his eyes saw thru the mist in the jungles of Africa; Charles Ross was recognized as the leader of a party hunting for elephants.

The next Senior's future that was reflected on the crystal was Mae Lindsay. She had been attending a business college, but now was a banker in the First National Bank.

Once again the seer placed his long fingers over the bulb, watching for the light, when a little farmhouse presented itself with its mistress, VaLeda Simpson, now Mrs. Connor. From the house a man could be seen on a plow in the field, who was recognized as our old friend, Bill Connor.

As this scene disappeared a busy city was seen on the crystal, with people going in and out of a large drug store. The smiling face of Lee Larmer was seen. He had become the manager of the drug store and was indeed making good.

The light flickered, but shone again in all its brilliancy with Bill Carr, the president of First National Bank.

The next Senior's future which was seen was John Fitts'. Surrounded by men of distinction, he was found in the Senate, the leader of the Democratic party.

The room was silent, but when the light shone Wilford Schafer was found to be the owner of a barber shop.

As the seer looked upon the crystal, a battle field was dimly seen. As the light became brighter, Blanche Whaley was recognized as a Red Cross nurse.

The last Senior's future that the seer saw was Floyd Stipes. Floyd was now the manager of a telephone company.

As the light slowly went out, the seer withdrew his mystic hands from the crystal and smiled, for the future of the Senior Class of 1917 had been seen.—B. W.

Last Will and Testament

TO Whom It May Concern: Greetings.

We, the members of the Senior Class of 1917, Hoisington High School, Hoisington, County of Barton, State of Kansas, do hereby bequeath our talents and possessions in said Hoisington High School to our chosen and worthy successors, witness:

Vera Anthony wills her place on the debate team to Hult Schneider. Work hard, Hult, to retain the good name.

William Carr wills his presidency of the Senior Class to Alex Ochs. Do your best, remembering the uncertainty of another election.

Wilford Schafer wills his ability for argument to Albert Bott. Take good care of it, especially in Physics.

Robert Redding surrenders his short trousers to David Wilhelm. May they ever be useful.

Margaret Stoskopf surrenders her monstrous ear rings to Retta Jessup, also her basket ball starship to Golda Barnes. Don't weep, Golda, but always do as Margaret did.

Veronica Johnston bequeaths her melodious voice to Marjorie Shaw. Use it to the best advantage.

J. Oliver McIlwaine wills his pompadour to Arthur Poland. Comb it carefully and use vaseline.

John Fitts surrenders his star ability for basket ball to Bob Connor, also his basket ball shoes to Mary Hooker. May they serve you, Mary, as they have John.

Mae Lindsay wills her Cicero knowledge to Rama Barnes, thinking it may come in handy.

VaLeda Simpson wills her winning smile to Nina Larmer. It is a sure cure for the blues.

Charles Ross wills his popularity with the girls to Russell Garrett, also his ability to shoot goals to Bill Nelson. Don't falter by the wayside.

Mae Abel wills her leadership of suffragettes to Lucy Humphrey. See to it, Lucy, that Kansas stays dry.

Gordon Thomas bequeaths his knowledge of Physics to Albert Nimocks. Hold on to it.

Mildred Woodburn gives her week dates to Katherine Siegfried. Be sure, Katherine, to take everyone.

Ruth Doty wills her shortness to Ruth Heltemes. Keep up the standard.

Floyd Stipes bequeaths his gossiping nature to the ladies' aid society.

Will Connor wills his rosy cheeks to John Forester, also his basket ball tact to Lanning Rankin.

Lee Larmer surrenders his referee whistle and rule book to Wallace Ragan. May you always be neutral as Lee has always been.

Jennie Hankins gives up her place at the piano to Doris Hendrix. Do your best, but you can hardly take Jennie's place.

Blanche Whaley gives a peroxide bottle to Ada Nuss. Directions: Use it as many times as needed.

We, the above Seniors, do solemnly swear and affirm that this last will and testament of the class of 1917, of Hoisington High School, made, signed and sealed this first day of May, in the year of our Lord 1917, is valid in all respects, and must not be contested by any person. Let its various provisions be carried out in full as herein stated.

Witnesses:

JOHNIE DOLITTLE.

JIMMIE SINGLETREE.

OTTO MOBILE.

In witness whereof, I hereunto set my hand and affix my seal this First day of May, in the year of our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Seventeen.

J. R. WILLIAMS,
Official Dogcatcher Notary Public.

BUILDING TIME

You can build a good comfortable house at any season of the year, and it is something that is essential to a happy home. Many of the people hereabouts will soon be erecting new buildings, or repairing old ones.

Such people will want Lumber that will stand for keeps—lumber of quality—lumber that has been properly prepared and seasoned.

That is the kind of stock we carry. Ask for our free book of plans.
