The journalism class of "57" and "58" was composed of thirteen seniors. Throughout the year the Cardinal Chirp Staff and the Yearbook Staff were busy writing articles for the weekly paper and organizing and preparing the yearbook. October 8, 1957, the journalism class sponsored a Yearbook Assembly, which began the yearbook sales.

Mr. Harland Hoffman was the journalism sponsor throughout the year.

A black and white photograph of a school band performing on a stage. The band is composed of several students, mostly young men, seated in rows. They are holding various instruments, including brass instruments like tubas and euphoniums, and woodwinds. A male adult, likely the band director, stands in the center of the stage, playing a saxophone. To the right of the director, a female student is seated at a grand piano. The stage is backed by a large, dark, pleated curtain. In the foreground, a wooden bench is visible, suggesting the photo was taken from the audience. The overall scene captures a formal musical performance in a school setting.
